On May 1, 2000, Constable Daryl Elliott Green was ambushed and TWICE SHOT from less than a metre away. Despite critical head injuries, he drew his firearm, protected his incapacitated partner and the public, searched for the gunman, and attempted to locate a missing colleague. His actions earned him the Valour Award — the Queensland Police Service's highest accolade for bravery — but the true challenge was only just beginning. Today, he shares with audiences around the world a high-performance blueprint and lessons forged in the firestorm of a near-death ambush.
